

MAYSVILLE, KENTUCKY, MONDAY, MARCH 2, 1914.

ONE COPY—ONE CENT.

The Value of a Smile.

The thing that goes the farthest
Toward making life worth while,
That costs the least and does the most,
Is just a pleasant smile.
It's full of worth and goodness, too,
With hearty kindness blent;
It's worth a million dollars,
And it doesn't cost a cent.

Today is County Court day and a big crowd is expected in the city.

MANY SHEEP AFFECTED.

Live Stock Inspector Mitchell informs The Public Ledger that there are many sheep afflicted with grub in the head and that many of the animals are dying.

INSURANCE

Twenty-five years ago we paid 75c. per $100 on a frame building with five coal stoves in different parts of the building. Today on same site, $2.60 per $100 on building now of brick and metal, one floor, and heated by steam. Then the city had a volunteer fire department and now a fine up to date paid system and yet look at the increase.

Looking at the changes in our own business every department is from 25 cents to 100 per cent. better and cheaper. Why is Kentucky's insurance rate higher than any State in the union and 4 per cent. higher than the average for the entire United States and territories.

J. T. KACKLEY & CO.

ONE CASE OF SMALLPOX.

He was married three times, his wife Mrs. Loula Wright and seven children surviving—four by his second wife, Mrs. Howard Hill, John, Charles and Russell, and three small children by his last wife.

497,785 POUNDS

Of Tobacco Sold On The Maysville Market Last Week—14,646,060 Pounds Total Season's Sales.

The market sold the past week 497,785 pounds. The market has sold for the season—to date—14,646,060 pounds at an average of $10.98.

The offerings for the past week were very inferior. The market closed strong. We would insist on all growers rushing their balance of the crop into the market.

Do not carry a crop over. Clean up your barn.

W. E. CLIFT, Supervisor.
February 28th, 1914.

Tobacco Notes.

Despite the blizzard tobacco continued to roll into Maysville yesterday and last night.

It is now evident that the total sale on the Maysville market this season will reach about 16,000,000 pounds, about 7,000,000 pounds short of last year's sales.

Total sales for the season at Lexington, now 37,945,225 pounds, with a season average of $12.29, and while, of course, most of the crop is sold now it seems probable that the market will sell 40,000,000 pounds.

Sales on Lexington market last week were 1,702,760 pounds.

The City Council meets tonight.

Mr. G. H. Bishop came in Saturday from near Sardis to spend a few days at home during the bad weather.

OUR COUNTRY'S UNEUGENIC FATHER.

The noble figure of George Washington has risen to refute the eugenists. It seems that when Washington proposed to Mrs. Martha Curtis he was a "dying man," to use his own phrase. Indeed, it was on a visit to his physician that he met the comely widow of 26 summers who was destined to become the first First Lady of the land. His health improved during the courtship, and after an "outing" that resulted in the fall of Fort Duquense, Mrs. Curtis became Mrs. Washington.

The defect of eugenics is that it does not take into account courage, the determination to live that builds rugged constitutions. The invalid of today may become the hale and hearty person of tomorrow, and vice versa. Washington lived to become the father of a country, which, with all its complaints, is still a fairly healthy and lusty specimen.—Times-Star.

TRULY FORGOTTEN.

Nothing could be a better evidence that all the bitterness of the great civil war has been forgotten than the appearance of General Joe Blackburn to turn the first earth for the Lincoln Memorial at Washington on Thursday.

General Blackburn was an officer in the Confederate army and fought against the forces of which Lincoln was the commander-in-chief. Yet he echoed the sentiment of the South as well as the North when he said on Thursday:

"Lincoln is now regarded as the greatest of all Americans, and he is so held in the South as well as in the North."

The complete obliteration of the most terrible dissension that ever existed in any nation within a period of fifty years must give us all hope that the petty questions upon which we Americans now divide and fall into the heat of passion, are but ephemeral in their effect, and will work no lasting injury to our national life.—Hamilton (O.) Republican-News.

THE WORDS OF WANAMAKER.

To the Editor of the Protectionist:
Scarcely had the New Year opened before John Wanamaker sounded a note of cheer, good times for the country, praise for the administration, censure for the stand-patters, incidental commendation for himself, and enough Protection to permit him to still call himself a Republican. Our defeat of 1912 is blamed on the stand-patters, and so runs the familiar Wanamaker strain.

May a man born and reared in a Protectionist atmosphere object to Mr. Wanamaker's claim to rank with the late Samuel J. Randall? If there ever was a man who endured abuse and insult for his tariff principles, Randall was the man. Wanamaker's record is of a different order. In 1890 he, as a member of Harrison's Cabinet, ought to have supported the new tariff act; but he flooded the country with advertisements urging everybody to buy before the high prices the oncoming law would let loose upon a helpless people. For the defeat of 1890 and the consequent disaster of 1892 we are indebted in no slight degree to the Wanamaker columns in the Philadelphia dailies. Years have flown, yet one can almost hear McAdoo's telling campaign speech: "I do not ask you to believe me; listen to what John Wanamaker, the lifelong Republican, the member of the present Cabinet says."

With the self-conscious air that has never failed him, Mr. Wanamaker can see many excellent features in the Wilson-Underwood tariff. So can most importers. There is nothing remarkable in his cheerfulness over the chances of an enormous gain in the sale of imports; still the delight is a little too pronounced; the average Protectionist chafes at the very thin layer of Republicanism and the large supply of Wanamakerism.

If the Republican party in 1916 concludes that it will adjust the tariff schedules so as to help Mr. Wanamaker's importing business rather than to start up the factories, the voters will stand by the Underwood measure. A TARIFFITE.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IS PROGRESSIVE ENOUGH.

The following are excerpts from the speech of Senator William E. Borah at the Republican dinner in Columbus:

We must destroy monopoly; it is at war with independent citizenship and free institutions, it finally destroys one and ultimately undermines the other.

We can make the Republican party itself thoroughly progressive as well as take its voters and make a progressive party.

A party which deals in fads and fancies, which sidesteps real issues and fails to meet real problems while flitting with theories and abstractions, can not be a progressive party.

I utterly disbelieve in the Democratic tariff policy. A policy which singles out and discriminates against the producing classes, which discourages them from remaining on the farm or going there, even a system which puts him in a class is shortsighted and intolerable, and will be disastrous and ruinous, not only to the whole country.

IS STILL THE BIG IKE.
A meeting of Republican big-wigs at Frankfort eliminated Senator Bradley from the next race. The Senator has a way of coming back that may astonish the self-constituted leaders of his party.—Cynthiana-Democrat.

The Republican party in Kentucky couldn't eliminate Senator Bradley if it tried. He is easily master of the situation as long as his health permits him to hold public office and ably fulfill his trust.

"FINE ENGLISH OVERCOATS."

Obediah Williams of Brookline, Mass., calls attention to the fact that "fine English overcoats" which sold for $30, $40, $50 and $65 "under the old tariff" are now advertised for $20, $30 and $40, and wants to know if this doesn't look as if the revised tariff is tending to reduce the cost of living "very appreciably."

Does Mr. Williams think the cost of living for the average workman has been reduced "very appreciably" by the reduction in price of these $40, $50 and $65 overcoats? This seems to us a good deal like lightening the proletariat's financial burden by reducing the price of bar-le-due currants and cherries in Maraschino. "Fine English overcoats" are luxuries which do not interest the $15, $20 or $25-dollar-a-week man.

But of course Mr. Williams was joking. He knows that this is the regular mark-down season, and that the "fine English overcoats" in question were imported under the old tariff. The apologists for a tariff that hasn't "produced the goods" will have to find some more convincing reason for the faith that is in them.—The Truth.

SEEKING GOVERNMENT JOB.

Many young men have an idea that a government clerkship in Washington is little short of an easy berth in Paradise. There are others, however, who have seen that side of life, or who have tried it, who believe otherwise. Robert M. Gates, a well-known Washington newspaper man, who has had splendid opportunities for studying the government clerk, writes entertainingly about the species.

"Working for Uncle Sam, which at first is a vocation, oftentimes becomes a disease, and an incurable one," writes Mr. Gates. "The saddest plaint one ever hears in Washington—sadder than the wail of the rejected office seeker—is that of the helpless and hopeless Government clerk lamenting his unhappy lot. He realizes that he is 'in bad,' and yearns for one more chance to right himself. He is in the net and cannot escape. He should like to extricate himself, but that is impossible. Perhaps his head has whitened and his hands have palsied in the service, and his years of steady employment are unrepresented by a dollar saved. His fate is sealed. Gloomily he trods his weary way. Perhaps he is a man yet capable of throwing off his Government harness and hitching himself to something better outside the cramping, grinding world of clerical slavery under official tyranny, but he has a family and cannot afford to take a chance. He has certain fixed expenses, and his income must be uninterrupted. He has not saved a penny, because his salary which looked quite sufficient when he was a single man, now is woefully inadequate under the added strain of the obligations of a family."

"He could fill satisfactorily most any position requiring clerical ability and experience, but he cannot let go his Government job to find something even equally as remunerative. He is afraid to take the chance. Years ago he might have quit the service to his advantage, but he held on, hoping that some day he would be advanced to the head of a division or to a chief clerkship, but he has dreamed dreams that never came true. There never was a chance for him to advance higher than $1,200 a year. There were hundreds of others struggling along with him and against him, so he has done well to keep his head above the water. Besides, he is not in sympathy with the party in power, and if he was, he has been trudging an obscure path so long that he is lost to helping Congressional influence. He has been away from his State, his district, his home so long that he has lost his identity and his Congressman feels only a reminiscent interest in him. So into the sear and yellow leaf of routine service he is doomed to pass, a grouchy, disappointed, and oftentimes a remorseful old man, who might have plowed a wider and deeper furrow if he had stayed off the Government reservation."—Lexington Leader.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY.

(New York Times.)

In trying to get to the top don't place too much dependence on the elevator.

There are times when the quitter and the fellow who never knows when he is licked envy each other.

Lightning never strikes twice in the same place. For that matter, luck seldom comes back to play a return engagement, either.

When he is cast in the shade the optimist rejoices that he won't suffer from sunstroke, anyhow.

A NEW ONE.

"At last," cried the musician, "I have fame within my grasp."

"How so?" asked his wife, who had heard the same thing before.

"You know Mendelssohn's 'Wedding March,' and the marvelous repote it brought him?" said the musician.

"Yes; but what of it?"

"Well, I'm going to write a divorce march."

The Proof That Maysville Readers Cannot Deny.

What could furnish stronger evidence of the efficiency of any remedy than the test of time? Thousands of people testify that Doan's Kidney Pills have brought lasting results.

Home endorsement should prove undoubtedly the merit of this remedy. Years ago your friends and neighbors testified to the relief they had derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. They now confirm their testimonials. They say time has completed the test. Mr. C. Chisholm, 317 East Second street, Maysville, Ky., says: "There was a time when my kidneys were badly disordered and I was annoyed by many symptoms of kidney complaint. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Wood & Son's Drug Store, removed the trouble and my good health since then is evidence of their merit. I have seen many other cases where Doan's Kidney Pills have proven their worth. My former endorsement of this remedy still holds good."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

AT HIGH SCHOOL TONIGHT

LINCOLN MCCONNELL.

Lincoln McConnell, who is to lecture here, is the son of a Tennessee lawyer and was early trained in the study of law. At the close of his college career he went west and became a cowboy, but later returned to the south, where he became a policeman on the Atlanta police force. He was soon promoted to the position of detective. In which capacity he served for four years, and still later acted as assistant to the collector in the criminal court for two years.

He was converted while a member of the police force and determined that he would spend his time in uplifting men rather than in putting them in jail. Since that time he has been able to help thousands. His experience in dealing with criminals makes him an authority on the subject, "Crime and Lawlessness," which is one of his lecture topics.

Mr. McConnell served for a time as pastor of the downtown People's church in Atlanta, where his congregation often reached 2,000 and where he built up a great downtown movement. His work as an evangelist is well known.

He has made over 4,000 public addresses in the last twelve years, and wherever he has gone he is universally conceded to be one of the most original, forceful and unique speakers before the public.

He is a natural wit and humorist and, without the slightest straining after it, gets into instant touch with his audience, and they laugh or cry as he wills, though they laugh more than they cry, for he says the world has enough to cry over without his adding to it.

IMMIGRATION

1,500,000 Aliens Will Come To U. S. In 1914, Says Nolan.

Washington.—Immigration was discussed in the House again during the debate on the urgent deficiency appropriation bill. After being told that inspection work on the Canadian and Mexican borders and at Ellis Island would have to be curtailed because of lack of funds, the House added $95,000 to the appropriation for the Immigration Bureau. Representative Nolan, of California, declared that if immigration continued this year as it had started, more than a million and a half aliens would enter the country in 1914, exceeding the 1913 total by a quarter of a million.

Because he felt that Alfonso Diaz had grounds for the jealousy which caused him to slay his wife, Gov. Hooper, of Tennessee, commuted his death sentence to life imprisonment.

MERELY A CASE OF SHAKEDOWN.

(Angusta Chronicle.)
The Mildred Crane juvenile delinquency case is receiving a great amount of newspaper notoriety at this time in Cincinnati, with the result that several citizens have been arrested on a serious charge. The girl's mother claims that she was not 17 years of age at the time. From a reliable source we learn that these people formerly lived at Bethel, Ohio, and that the girl is at least 19 years of age, and it is alleged that this is a case of "shake down" on the part of some one.

BASEBALL NO NUISANCE

Texas Court of Appeals Declares It Innocent and Legitimate Pastime.

And now comes a court and assures every citizen of us that baseball is not in itself bad. What a relief must it not be for those who have heretofore been subjected to the vituperations of well-meaning friends after their return from a Sunday baseball game. They may now, with stately wrath, turn to the case of Royce Independent School District vs. Reinhardt, 159 Southwestern Reporter, 1010, and, as supporting their defense, cite Chief Justice Rainey, of the Court of Civil Appeals of Texas, who says: "That the game of baseball is not a nuisance per se is well settled." This point arose in a suit to enjoin the trustees of the school district and members of a club supporting baseball from fulfilling their contract of leasing part of the school grounds for a baseball field during the summer months. The injunction was denied because the contract provided against unlawful conduct on the grounds and was such as to be financially beneficial to the school district. In speaking further about baseball, the court said: "It is an innocent or legitimate amusement, and, like a legitimate business, to warrant an injunction stopping or destroying it, it must appear that the indulgence in it is necessarily a nuisance."

WASHINGTON CITY SIDELIGHTS

Prisoner Sends Pictures to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson

WASHINGTON.—When President Wilson reached Washington after his vacation on the Gulf coast, he found awaiting him two pencil portraits, one of himself and the other of Mrs. Wilson. There was also a story, the like of which he had not met with every day since he entered the White House. The pictures are the work of a convict in Sing Sing prison, and the story is that of his life. Both pictures and story are remarkable, so much so that several philanthropists in New York city, which was the scene in recent years of the crime of which the prisoner was convicted, saw to it that the pictures were sent to the White House, and have tried to implant a bit of hope in the man behind the bars.

Under one consideration only was the story of the pictures and contents of the letter which accompanied them revealed by the philanthropists, and that was absolute secrecy as to the prisoner's name and the details of his crime.

The convict's letter to the president was as follows:

"To the President of the United States:
Your Excellency: It is not a desire to present a work of art which prompts me to send you this picture, for I realize there must be many crudities, owing to the fact that I never took a drawing lesson in my life; rather is it a token of highest regard and sincerest esteem which have been engendered within one of your humblest admirers.

"This picture and that of Mrs. Wilson are the only ones I have ever attempted; there were no mechanical aids—just the naked eye. All the work was done with an ordinary lead pencil, and to it were devoted the leisure moments of three months. It was executed in a cell whose dimensions are 3½ by 7 by 6 feet. The cell was illuminated by an 8-candlepower lamp, and the enlargement was made from a newspaper print, which accompanies the pictures.

"In view of these things it is hoped the crudities shall be overlooked, and each line and plane will testify to the respect and veneration in which the president is held by an obscure young man so low down in the social scale. Respectfully,

One day, it is said, the convict saw another prisoner at work on a picture. Later a small bit of lead was doing considerable work each night in another cell. This time it was the photographs of the president and his wife that served as originals.

Then came a visit from the philanthropists. For a long time they had been interested in the young man. In fact, for five years they had sought to get inside the armor of moroseness that seemed to envelop him. At intervals they saw the pictures developing, gave their encouragement, and finally one day they were completed.

"A remarkable result of the work," said one of the philanthropists, "was its dispelling of the hopeless attitude of the prisoner. He grew infatuated with his work. His mind took on a new lease of life from having something to do. The shell of moroseness was cast off."

The pictures were sent to New York city, framed, and forwarded to the White House.

Nettleton Declares Mustache Will Have to Go

JOHN GILBERT NETTLETON, secretary to Congressman Martin B. Madden of Chicago, is having a hard time convincing his friends in the capital that he is the said Nettleton. The difficulty is all due to a small and a very black mustache. Here is the history of the hirsute adornment.

Mr. and Mrs. Nettleton had tired of conventional vacations. They wanted something out of the ordinary, and so they engaged passage on a lumber boat on the great lakes last summer.

The itinerary took the vessel to many places, with most of the time passed in open lake. Shaving seemed a loss of time and somewhat of a useless effort. Therefore the captain and Mr. Nettleton decided to let their whiskers grow. Eventually they made Duluth and with the usual longing of good sailors, couldn't resist going ashore. Whiskers, by that time luxuriant, were sacrificed, but the mustaches were left on. By the time Chicago was again reached Mr. Nettleton's facial attainment had become a matter of pride. He has nourished it tenderly ever since. But, alas! it will probably have to go after all.

"It is either the loss of my mustache or of the kisses of one of my dearest friends," said Mr. Nettleton. "And I guess it will have to be the mustache. When three-year-old Paul Henderson, Jr., Mr. Madden's grandson, was making the round of the family the other night, kissing them good night, he overlooked me.

"When I reminded the young man, he acknowledged the oversight, but he pointed to my prized mustache, and declared in a lisping voice that it tickled. He compromised by kissing what my friends know to be a high forehead, noted for its scarcity of hair.

"I guess the mustache will have to go."

Always Eating Something at the Food Bureau

THEY are always eating something down at the bureau of food hygiene. Incidentally they study out mathematically the different ingredients which can best be combined with a certain brand of nutrient to make a pleasant dish, and the result of these experiments are duly set forth by Uncle Sam in his official cook-books. One time they started on tomatoes. They succeeded in doing things to tomatoes that the most imaginative tomato on earth never anticipated. They achieved stews that were wonders, and everybody duly performed the rite of gastronomy, fetterizing the food and giving comfortable consideration to the progress of digestion.

It may not be supposed that this is mere idle experimenting. The result of the bureau are published broadcast by the newspapers and millions of people in the United States follow, without knowing it, the advice to these two scientists in matters of food. They are given chief credit for the recent popularity of mutton—not lamb, but good old English mutton.

It was Dr. Milner's idea that if more people would eat full-grown sheep instead of lambs the supply of meat in the United States would be perceptibly increased. Coming from old English stock himself and appreciating the value of proper recipes for cooking mutton, which has a peculiarly strong odor, he set out to carry the ideas into effect.

That he was wonderfully successful was subsequently attested by requests he received for copies of the book which he put out through the department. It is a noticeable fact that Dr. Milner, during the ten days or two weeks of experimentation, lived almost exclusively on mutton.

"Treasury Clerk" Comes Back After Fifty Years

JOHN BURROUGHS of Roxbury, N. Y., naturalist, the other day unostentatiously visited with Representative Edmund Platt the scene of his labors of 50 years ago, when he was a clerk, and saw for the first time the show places that are now viewed daily by thousands of tourists, who on coming to the capital make the treasury one of their chief points of interest, were as virgin territory to Mr. Burroughs, although he had a half century ago worked in the treasury building for nine years as clerk and later as national bank examiner for 11 years.

Mr. Burroughs found some places in the treasury unchanged despite the passing of time since he had before them, and pointed out the second floor where he had written his "Wake Robin," published in 1871, the second book compiled by this now famous man of letters, several men whom he had not seen since he worked with them 40 years ago, and shook hands with several women who had been as clerks, and several men who had served him as messengers.

He was introduced to United States Treasurer John Burke, but that portion of the building he had never before seen. Burroughs called on President Wilson, and has lived on a farm, devoting his time to fruit

PRESIDENT HUERTA'S METHOD OF FINANCING HIS ADMINISTRATION

Mexican Dictator Has Very Effective Way of Raising Money at Home by "Special Taxes" or "Patriotic Subscriptions"—Country Very Rich and Nowhere Do People Spend More Freely on Clothes, Jewels and Amusement.

In a recent article a Mexico City newspaperman, who for his own protection must remain anonymous, told some inside details of the battle of Tampico. In the following articles, smuggled past the Mexican censor, this same correspondent tells of the methods by which President Huerta finances his administration.—Editor's Note.

City of Mexico, via Havana, Cuba.—Since the Mexican government under President Huerta has been prevented from borrowing money abroad it has ment is continually devising new means for raising money from the people. The stamp tax, which was very heavy even before Mexico had a revolution, has been doubled recently. Every bill for merchandise, every check to pay such bills, every page of an account book, every receipt for money received in sums exceeding five pesos, every real estate transfer, every legal paper, every telegram must be stamped. The doubling of the stamp taxes recently has netted the government many thousands of dollars a day.

"But Huerta hasn't begun," said a wealthy hacienda owner the other day. "He has just scratched the surface when it comes to getting money to run his government. I live in Jalisco and the extra taxes this year have cost me $63,000. It is merely another name for a forced loan, but forced loans are necessary when a country has a war on hand. Huerta can raise 500,000,000 pesos without going outside of Mexico if he sets his mind to it. I think he has been very moderate so far, but if he is pushed too hard, he may come down on the people hard. He may even issue government fiat money. There is no reason why he should not if he cannot raise money abroad. The United States issued such money during our Civil war; why shouldn't Mexico? If Woodrow Wilson is waiting for Mexico to go broke, he'll wait a long, long time—much longer than his presidential term.

Mexico is not going broke. Mexico is one of the wealthiest countries in resources of any in the world. The vast majority of the people are poor, but the rich are exceedingly rich and there is a very large middle class in comfortable circumstances. Every afternoon in this city many hundreds of expensive automobiles parade up and down Avenida San Francisco. No where on earth do people spend money more freely on clothes, jewels been obliged to look for funds at home and so far there has been little or no trouble in getting them. President Wilson's financial blockade of Mexico has worked perfectly so far, but President Wilson cannot prevent Huerta from getting money from the people who live in Mexico and have property here and he is getting it in substantial sums day after day in various ways.

The simplest and easiest way for a government to obtain money under a dictatorship is by levying forced loans. It is a quick and direct method and cannot fail where the power to enforce the loans is absolute. But it does not look well to have it get abroad that forced loans are being levied here and so they are usually sugar-coated and go under the name of "special taxes," or "patriotic subscriptions" to government bonds.

In Cuernavaca recently $200,000 was raised in a single day from merchants and wealthy residents to pay the troops of the garrison there. The government called this a "popular subscription" to pay for protection, but the subscribers called it a forced loan. The same thing was done in Guaymas not long ago and in many other places from time to time. Here in the City of Mexico the banks all subscribed to government bonds about two months ago and some twenty million pesos was raised in this way. That was not a forced loan, but the banks did not want those bonds. They were persuaded that it would be a good thing for them to buy them, not on account of their value, but because the government would appreciate the favor.

In the state of Jalisco recently a special tax of 4½ per cent. of the value of all property, real and personal, was levied. That was not a forced loan, but it took the money from the people just as effectively. Other states are about to have these special taxes, too, and the govern-luxuries and is not anywhere near the necessity plane yet.

Huerta personally is very well off. His tastes are simple and he is not a money grabber. Gossip says that he has feathered his nest very handsomely since he became dictator, but gossip exaggerates. He is not a rich man. He is much more concerned about getting money to pay his soldiers than to put in his private coffers.

Of late President Huerta has gone out of his way many times to show courtesy to Americans. He says that he likes Americans and always has a good word for them. He always speaks pleasantly of President Wilson. He is never abusive, even when discussing Wilson's antagonism to himself. He seems to consider President Wilson as a mistaken person, but honest in his mistakes. To Charge d'Affaires Nelson O'Shaughnessy President Huerta is always most cordial. He says he is fond of the young American diplomat and also of his countrymen, and he takes pains to show it.

President Huerta, like President Wilson, is waiting. He thinks he can tire out Wilson just as Wilson thinks he can tire out Huerta. He has given instruction to all his officers to protect Americans and to pay no attention to any small matters where Americans may be aggressors. He believes in being tolerant, in being courteous, in being kind, and he has an idea that a continuance of this policy will have its effect upon the government of the United States eventually.

CRABS ROOT UP SAPLINGS

Certain Species on Island Also Steal Eggs From Under Sitting Hens.

London.—Some interesting facts respecting the destructiveness of certain species of crabs in Grand Cayman, an island in the British West Indies, appear in a bulletin just issued from the Royal Botanic gardens at Kew and written by T. M. S. English, who has lived there three years.

The edible crab, he says, grows to a considerable size, an old male being sometimes six inches across and having its larger claw no less than 14 inches in length from its junction with the body to the end of its "jaws." The female has smaller claws, but apparently they are most destructive.

They are great burrowers and cannibals, too. In places where they abound nothing is safe from them. They will take into their holes things for which they cannot conceivably find a use—a knife, for instance or a pocket compass. They will eat the eggs from under a sitting hen, if not the hen herself, as readily as the leaves of seedling coconut trees, and of these from six to ten per cent. have to be replaced if they are planted in newly cleared ground before the crabs have been very thoroughly thinned out. They are responsible for frequent patches of bare soil in the "bush," which become covered with vegetation when the crabs are gone.

During the drier months of the early part of the year they go underground to change their shells and add to their destructiveness by barricading the mouths of their holes with masses of sticks and rubbish like jackdaws' nests, nipping off or rooting up saplings as much as three-quarters of an inch in diameter for the purpose.

MRS. FUNK SEEKS AMENDMENT

Illinois Woman Challenges Anti-Suffragist Leaders in Washington to Joint Debate.

Washington.—Mrs. Antoinette Funk, the temporary head of the National Woman's Suffrage Association at Washington, is pushing feminist efforts for a federal amendment, the leading aim at present of suffrage workers. Mrs. Funk's challenge to Augustus Gardner, one of the anti-suffragist leaders in Washington, for a joint debate was made to give a clearer setting to the questions at issue. Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, when told of the contest, said: "I am glad that Mrs. Funk is to do the debating for us, for nobody could represent the suffrage cause any better than she. I shouldn't be surprised if some of the anti-become suffragists as a result of it. I am sure it will do a great good."

Mrs. Funk, who is a lawyer, has done much work for the woman's cause and is one of the quartet of women who were responsible for the suffrage legislation at Springfield, Ill.

sacks of telegrams, and within a short time had sent replies to most of them.

The income derived from this sort of business by the federal telegraph and post offices must be very large every year.

There is a general feeling, however, that this indiscriminate betting by foreigners in a foreign country should not be permitted. The English bookmakers are aware that they are only "tolerated" and may be expelled from the country at any time.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Director of Evening Department, The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.)

LESSON FOR MARCH 1

TRUSTING IN RICHES AND TRUSTING IN GOD.

LESSON TEXT.—Luke 12:13-24. GOLDEN TEXT.—"Where your treasure is, there will be your heart also."—Luke 12:34.

The section before us has a very logical progression from the introductory request to the words of Jesus which constitute the golden text. Jesus is still in the midst of his Perea ministry. This lesson occurred but a few months before the crucifixion.

1. The lesson vv. 13-15. "One out of the multitude" desired to bolster his claim to a portion of an inheritance. He was sure that his brother needed admonition from Jesus, the result of which would accrue to his advantage. Jesus made a sharp, quick reply. He had been teaching about the sin of covetousness, but by his answer he intimates that his mission was not to judge men of that or any other sin. His work as a judge was to come later, John 5:19-32. There are thousands who for the prospect of personal gain would strictly enforce the ethical principles of the gospel though at the same time they are not willing themselves to abide thereunder. Covetousness is a desire to secure more and it is not confined to the rich nor to the poor. Therefore Jesus sounds a warning, "take heed" (v. 15) e. g., beware. This itching is so gradual and often begins with a desire to possess things that are good of themselves and frequently by good for him that has possession. But as it creeps in we find it becoming a great sin. A desire to build up a church, or even to compass the salvation of a loved one, may be animated by a selfish, covetous motive, see 1 Cor. 5:10, 11; 6:10, and Eph. 5:3. A man's life consists not of the things possessed and the desire to get should be lost in the desire to be for the glory of God.

2. The illustration, vv. 16-21. This warning of Jesus against wrong sense valuation and his suggestion as to the true source of life, are emphasized by his illustration from life. All material values come from the earth. Mine, forest and field are the sources of all wealth. But in this illustration the ground yielded "plentifully." He took great counsel with himself. In these three verses are twelve personal pronouns. Prosperity is heaped upon prosperity, yet his enterprises were lawful and legitimate for there is no suggestion of wrong methods. The trouble was that in his self-centered pride he saw only the gratification of his material appetites. Any human activity, even the highest, may become grossly self-centered. His plans of enlargement were wise in the sight of men, but he left God out of his calculations, and this is the common mistake worldly men are making. Jas. 4:13-15. His anxiety, a characteristic of those who trust in riches, was uncalculated for, and the folly of that course was revealed in a flash when he was called into the presence of God: "The things which thou hast prepared, whose shall they be?" Jesus reveals the worthlessness of such motives, the uselessness of such anxiety, and its unworthiness in view of what God is in himself, vv. 20, 21. He who can array the lily and clothe the grass of the field. The place to lay up goods is not in barns, Mark 10:21; the right way to be merry is to lighten the burden of another and the way to satisfy the soul is not to pamper the body. Read John 4:13, 14; John 7:37-39; 1 Tim. 5:6; Jas. 5:5; Rev. 18:7.

3. True Way of Life. III. The application, vv. 22-34. Jesus then proceeds to set before his disciples the true way of life from the positive side, just as in the illustration he had set before them the negative side. Those who are living in right relationships with God are not to seek satisfaction in the things of time and sense, those things of which their father knows they have need, and which he will supply. Phil. 4:19. They are, however, to seek his kingdom and to rest in confidence in the knowledge that it is his pleasure to give to them that kingdom (v. 32). The way to get is to give. Prov. 11:24, 25. This is laying up treasure in heaven. Every man is the judge of his own acts. If he be according to divine standards, his decision is wise, if not, the Bible characterizes that man as a fool. It is our sense of values which determines our wisdom.

IV. The teaching. Jesus does not begin in his dealings with the subjects of his kingdom by making compulsory division of their possessions. In this lesson we can see the false and the true method by which to establish right social conditions. This man's idea was to "divide"; Christ's idea is expressed in the words, "sell and give alms." The passion of this man was to possess, the passion of Christ was to give, Matt. 20:28. In the mind of Christ, life does not consist of the things possessed, John 6:27. Things have a value only as life is strong enough to possess them, but the strongest life may not have any earthly possessions. Where a man's heart is there is his treasure; where his treasure is there will his heart be also. If the kingdom of God is of supreme importance then the chief effort of a life will be to establish that kingdom. The man who is governed by such a motive will not be charged with withholding his brother's portion of an inheritance, and he is the man who is ever eager to invest his all for the ultimate establishment of that kingdom. This man is "rich towards God," and Jesus intimates that we who are in his kingdom are to be free from all anxiety and care about the things of this life.

SWEEPSTAKE UPON SWEEPSTAKE

CANADA ADDING OTHERS TO ITS SERIES OF VICTORIES.

A Manitoba Steer Carries Off Similar Honors to Those Won by a Half-Brother in 1912.

When Glencarnock L., the Aberdeen Angus steer, owned by Mr. McGregor of Brandon, Manitoba, carried off the sweepstakes at the Chicago Live Stock Show in 1912, it was considered to be a great victory for barley, oats and grass versus corn. So that there might be no doubt of the superiority of barley feeding, Manitoba climate, and judgment in selecting the animal, Mr. McGregor placed in competition in 1913, another Aberdeen-Angus, a half-brother to the animal that won last year, and secured a second victory in the second year. In other classes he had excellent winnings, but the big victory was the sweepstakes for the best steer. This victory proved that Manitoba-grown barley and oats, and prairie hay, had properties better than any contained in corn, which in the past has been looked upon as being superior to other grains in fattening and finishing qualities. Not only this, but Glencarnock's victory proves that the climate of the prairie provinces of western Canada, in combination with rich foods that are possessed by that country, tends to make cattle raising a success at little cost.

Other winnings at the live stock show which placed western Canada in the class of big victories were: Three firsts, seven seconds, and five other prizes in Clydesdales. The winners, Bryce, Taber, Sutherland, Sinton, Mutch, McLean, Haggerly, Leckie and the University of Saskatchewan are like family names in Saskatchewan. Each one had "the goods" that won honor to himself and combined made a name and record for Saskatchewan. Look at the recent victories won by western Canada within the past three years. In February, 1911, Hill & Sons of Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, showed a peck of oats at the National Corn Exposition, held at Columbus, Ohio, and carried off the Colorado silver trophy, valued at $1,500. In February, 1913, the same men, father and son, had a similar victory at Columbia, N. C., and should they win in 1914 at Dallas, Texas, they will own the trophy. In 1911, Seager Wheeler of Rosthern won $1,000 in gold at the New York Land Show for the best 100 pounds of wheat. In 1912 at the Dry Farming Congress at Lethbridge, Alberta, Mr. Holmes of Cardston won the $2,500 Rumley engine for best wheat in the world. In 1913, at the Dry Farming Congress, held at Tulsa, Okla., Mr. P. Gerlack of Allen, Saskatchewan, carried off the honors and a threshing machine for the best bushel of wheat shown in competition with the world. In 1913 at the International Dry Farming Congress at Tulsa, Okla., Canada won the majority of the world's honors in individual classes, and seven out of the sixteen sweepstakes, including the grand prize for the best bushel of hard wheat. The grand prize, a threshing machine, was won by Paul Gerlack of best bushel of hard wheat, which weighed 71 pounds to the bushel, and was of the Marquis variety. In the district in which the wheat was grown that won this prize, there were thousands of acres this year that would have done as well. Mr. Gerlack is to be congratulated, as well as the province of Saskatchewan, and western Canada as a whole, for the great success that has been achieved in both grain and cattle.

Other prizes at the same place were: Best peck of barley, Nicholas Tetmeyer, Clatskanie, Alberta. Best peck of oats, E. J. Lanigan, Elmstoss, Saskatchewan. Best bushel of flax, John Plews, Carduff, Saskatchewan. Best sheaf of barley, A. H. Crossman, Kindersley, Saskatchewan. Best sheaf of flax, R. C. West, Kindersley, Saskatchewan. Best sheaf of oats, Arthur Perry, Cardston, Alberta. In district exhibits, Swift Current, Saskatchewan, won the Board of Trade Award, with Maple Creek seed.

Other exhibitors and winners were: Red Fife spring wheat, E. A. Fredrick, Maple Creek. Other variety of hard spring wheat, S. Hinglehart, Abernethy, Sask. Black oats, Alex Woolley, Horton, Alta. Western rye grass, W. S. Creighton, Stalwart, Sask. Sheaf of Red Fife wheat, R. H. Carter, Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask. Sheaf of winter wheat, C. N. Carney, D'Arst, Sask. Oats, any other variety, Wm. S. Simpson, Pambrun, Sask. Two-rowed barley, R. H. Carter, Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask. Six-rowed barley, R. H. Carter, Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask. Western rye grass, Arthur Perry, Cardston, Alta. Alsike clover, Seager Wheeler, Rosthern, Sask.—Advertisement.

WANTS TO BE GOVERNOR OF OKLAHOMA

Seldom in recent years have the ups and downs of life in this land of opportunity, the chances to make good and the impossibility of keeping a strong man down, been so patently exemplified as in the career of Al J. Jennings, former train robber and convict, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the governorship of the state of Oklahoma. After several years' outlawry in the southwest, Jennings was captured and sentenced to five years in the federal prison at Columbus, O. President McKinley pardoned him and President Roosevelt restored his citizenship. He had taken his medicine without a whimper and on his release set out to lead a life that frankly acknowledged the early mistakes and sought to better himself and others through what he had learned.

WELL LIKED IN WASHINGTON

Since her husband became a member of President Wilson's cabinet, Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wife of the secretary of the navy, has made herself one of the best loved women in Washington. Her personal popularity and that of her husband may be explained in the words of a white-haired woman who, last New Year day when the Secretary and Mrs. Daniels were holding a public reception, sat in their drawing room near the receiving line, holding a court of her own. Glancing proudly toward the host and hostess, the white-haired woman remarked:

"Those two love the whole world. No wonder people love them."

The speaker was Mrs. Daniels' mother, who knew whereof she spoke.

When Mrs. Daniels came from Raleigh, N. C., a few months ago to take her place in Washington's social life as one of the cabinet hostesses she brought with her four interesting young sons and their old colored nanny, also a few choice pieces of mahogany from her childhood home at Raleigh, her family servants and her receipt for beaten biscuit, an indispensable article of food on southern tables. Consequently the home of Secretary and Mrs. Daniels is typically southern in many respects. They are established for the season on Woodley Lane. They chose the house and its surrounding acres in order that the four Daniels boys, who are as much alive as only healthy, young boys can be, might have plenty of space in which to romp, a barn, a woodpile, an orchard and other luxuries of boyhood.

Since coming to Washington Mrs. Daniels has devoted herself to the care of her boys and to the discharge of the many social duties which devolve upon her as a member of the cabinet circle. She still keeps in touch, however, with the public work in which she and Secretary Daniels are interested in Raleigh.

as your brethren except for one thing. They bring a fetch of tradition to politics—you think only of the concrete present. And in that fact lies much of your power.

"I can remember when government was an intangible thing; when one thought of it as some vague power. Women have done more than change laws; they have made of government a common, ordinary useful thing."

"With women has arisen a new philosophy of government—a world-wide philosophy which belongs to no party, no sect nor no sex. This new philosophy believes that the government's purpose is to make people happier; to make them better; that the only successful government which does this."

ROGER SULLIVAN OUT FOR SENATOR

Roger C. Sullivan, former national Democratic committeeman from Illinois, whose elimination from party councils once was demanded by W. J. Bryan, has announced his candidacy for the nomination for United States senator. His announcement opens as follows:

"I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator."

"No one has forced me into the contest; nor am I responding to insistent demands from all parts of the state."

"It is true that a great many warm and loyal friends throughout Illinois have urged me to become a candidate and have offered me their best support; but I shall not make a false start by pretending to be a coy or reluctant candidate."

"The honor of representing Illinois in the United States senate is great enough for any man's ambition and the opportunity it offers for creditable public service is, in itself, sufficient reward."

A large part of Sullivan's ample fortune was made in the gas business in Chicago. His present views of public service companies' obligations to the public are as follows:

"I long since came to the conclusion that large business organizations, especially public service companies, should, and eventually must, accept one of two alternatives, namely: Government regulation or government ownership of the sources of supply and means of delivery to the places of consumption."

WAITING FOR PATT

By T. B. EATON

Taps, his intimates called him—Taps Scudder. He was big, more than passably good looking, had a splendid income quite outside his pay, and was a lieutenant, junior grade, in the navy.

Orders had come detaching him from duty at the yard and instructing him to join the Comorant for sea duty.

He stood on the steps of the admiral's house—the admiral was commander of the navy yard—a scowl on his face and a heart within him like several tons of lead. Evelyn Howard, the admiral's daughter, had just refused him again, and tomorrow he would be at sea or he knew not how many years. The Comorant was headed for the Philippines.

Still scowling, he began to walk down the path. A syringa bush on the little lawn was in full bloom.

Behind the syringa bush sounded a childish voice singing a popular song. It ceased as he moved down the path, and Patty Howard, with all the impulsiveness of a dozen years coupled with very strong likes and dislikes, sped from behind the bush and threw herself into Taps Scudder's arms.

"Oh, Taps," she cried, "are you really going away tomorrow?"

"Tonight, Patty," said he, smiling down at her. "We sail tomorrow."

"And you've just been up to see Evelyn?"

He nodded.

"And she turned you down again?"

"That's not a nice way of putting it," he chided mildly.

"Well, did she?" she persisted. "You needn't answer. Taps, I see it in that coat of yours. And you look hurt and angry, too. Did she say she'd marry you if you'd leave the service?"

He smiled rather wanly.

"You're not going to?"

"I'm sailing tomorrow on the Comorant," said he.

"Well, don't you leave the service, Taps—not for Evelyn nor anybody else," she said.

"Why?" he asked.

"Oh, well, for one thing just because, and for another because you are so awfully, awfully handsome in a uniform."

"That last is the best reason, Patty," he laughed. "Just for that I won't leave the service."

"Well, don't. Promise me you won't."

"I promise."

He stooped. She lifted her pretty, childish face and kissed him resoundingly, not once, but over and over.

Then he went on down the path, the incident forgotten. He was scowling again and his heart was sore within him. Evelyn Howard, had, indeed, intimated this last afternoon that if he would leave the service she would marry him.

The next day he sailed on the Comorant. And it was a very depressed Taps Scudder that cruised about the Philippines.

He wrote Evelyn often—it seemed to be his only solace, that waiting impatiently for the letters from her. They were all of the same general trend. Why did he stay in the service, especially when he had plenty of money? He couldn't really care very much for her if he wouldn't leave the service for her sake.

Taps read those letters and bit his lips and paced the hot deck, and six years went past in this way.

Then he was ordered home, and the waters did not foam and hiss half loudly enough beneath the homeward pointing prow to suit him.

Evelyn was still heart-free, if he could believe her letters, and in a few weeks now he would see her.

During his absence Rear Admiral Howard had reached the age limit and been retired. He now lived in an imposing house in an exclusive suburb near the navy yard.

No sooner was he landed than Taps Scudder headed thither. It was a splendid place, with spacious grounds and a long, low rambling house set among Lombardy poplars.

Taps stood at the wide gates admiring it. The carriage which had brought him thither was rattling back toward the little suburban station.

A motor car came whirling into the driveway. A horn honked its strident warning. He turned about. There was a cry from the car; instantly it stopped.

"Oh, Taps, Taps, dear, I'm so glad to see you—so, so glad!"

He looked at her dazedly. He could not realize the change in her that six years had wrought. Could this be the little spindle-shanked girl he had left behind the syringa bush at the navy yard? He muttered in bewildered fashion:

"Patty! For goodness' sake—Patty!"

"You've grown handsome, Taps," she declared. "Why, you're awfully distinguished looking—not so boyish as you were. Aren't you glad you stayed in the service?"

"You bet I am, if I get my reward for it," said he.

"What was that?" said she.

"Do I have to ask you?" said he.

"No. Frankly, you don't," she declared. "I've remembered it every day and every hour since you left. But I didn't suppose you had."

"And you haven't changed a bit about your ideas of the service?" he asked at last.

"Why should I when you look so perfectly splendid in a uniform, Taps?" she asked.

HAPPENINGS in the BIG CITIES

Some Inside Facts About the "Great White Way"

NEW YORK.—Broadway is one of the longest and most remarkable streets in the world. It starts at Bowling Green, amidst towering office buildings and meanders off into the wilderness somewhere near Yonkers. Besides being noted for its night life, Broadway has more skyscrapers, cafes, restaurants, actors, get-rich-quick-men, paupers and automobiles to the mile than any other thoroughfare in America. It also is the headquarters of the Forty-second Street Country club, which meets every mild and sunny afternoon at Forty-second street and Broadway.

Broadway's principal industry is raising coin. In this art it has become quite proficient. Two classes of people frequent Broadway. They are New Yorkers without money and out-of-towners with money and anxious to separate from it. The New Yorkers without money have developed the art of appearing to have it to such a fine point that it becomes a science. The art of removing superfluous coin from the persons of joy-seeking strangers along Broadway may also be numbered among the higher arts and sciences.

Although Broadway is haunted by bandits masquerading as head waiters, cloak room boys, southern colonels, wealthy mine owners "just in from the west," but who were never further west than Hoboken; stock brokers, etc., it is usually safe to venture upon the thoroughfare after dark if one keeps one's senses.

Not all the dangers of Broadway come from the presence of professional "Broadwaits." There is a ferocious person known as a "taxi chuff," with whose cash acquiring instincts it is best not to experiment.

If the "taxi chuff" had not a taste for mechanics he probably would have become a headwaiter or a cloak room "boy." Instead of a mere driver of a taxicab, although it is very much open to question as to which pays the most.

At Bowling Green, Broadway is the very spirit of innocence. It runs past Wall street as if it were afraid of becoming contaminated. To add to its respectability at this point Broadway nestles in its arms Trinity church, a religious institution which owns tenement houses on the side. Past office buildings that shoot high into the air, Broadway runs to St. Paul's, where there is another church and graveyard. "How fortunate," sigh the night-lifers, frequenters of another part of Broadway, "that all of the churches and dead ones are at the lower end."

Ignoring the remarks of the gay Tenderloiners, Broadway dashes on uptown, past more office buildings, now not quite so tall, until Astor place is reached, just above which Grace church is met. From a thoroughfare of office buildings, Broadway has now changed into a street of plain commercial atmosphere. To tell the truth, however, Broadway has a commercial atmosphere for its entire length, although in the vicinity of Forty-second street it is skillfully disguised as "gayety."

When you begin to see the names of theatrical booking agents, when the cafes become more and more to the block, and the loters on the corners greater and greater in number, you know you are then getting into the famous "White Light" district.

Being gay along Broadway is a business. Some New Yorkers know just how to be gay, and thereby infect others with the brand of gayety that induces them to spend their money.

When the Singing Hushed, the Crowd Hurried On

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Coming down Meridian street one morning, shortly after 8 o'clock, just after crossing Ohio street, one heard a rich, sweet tenor voice. Pedestrians, hurrying to their work, listened to the sweet melody.

Persons in the street looked up at the windows in the board of trade building and again over toward Christ church, as the melody seemed to come from that direction. However, no window was open and no one was to be seen. The strains grew louder and the words, "Ach, ach la Morte" from "Il Trovatore," rang out clear and distinct.

Who is it! and where is it! was in everyone's mind and on every tongue. The sounds now came from the space between the board of trade building and Christ church, and the crowd moved in that direction. From the popular melody from "Il Trovatore" the singer took up the aria "Quando rapita in estasi," from "Lucia," and a florid and showy execution of that air followed.

By this time a policeman appeared and made inquiry as to the cause of the blockade. Apparently he was deaf to the music which every one enjoyed. His attention being called to the singing he walked to where a little hunchbacked street sweeper, stooping over his work, busily engaged in sweeping the alley, and utterly oblivious to the crowd, was giving vent to his enthusiasm by song.

"Shut up or I'll run yez in for disturbing the peace!" The singing was hushed, the spell was broken, and the crowd hurried on.

Cat Drives Off Burglars, and Puts Out a Fire

SPOKANE, WASH.—Sergeant Fred Pearson of the Spokane police department has a remarkable kangaroo cat, and the cat has a unique record of accomplishments for a feline. A year ago this cat began its career of notoriety by awakening Sergeant Pearson in time to drive three burglars away from his home. A few weeks later the cat put out a fire behind the kitchen stove by rolling in the flames, while Mrs. Pearson was in another room. Still another exploit was added to the cat's list of adventures when it woke Pearson up at midnight and led him to where a cow was doing damage to the garden. These are just a few of this animal's strange experiences.

Sergeant Pearson says his cat demonstrated its abnormal powers along a different line the other day, when it was Robert Brady, 7806 Langley avenue. The charge was "disorderly conduct" in kidnapping three goats.

"A year ago I wanted my shirt," Brady said.

"Well," said Judge Sullivan. "A goat had eaten it."

"Well, well," the court said sharply. "It ate all my underwear—and my wife's and—"

"Passing the anecdotes," interrupted the judge, "what have you to say in your defense?"

"And the children's gingham aprons—"

The judge drummed impatiently on his desk.

And then the back fence disappeared, and the back porch, and one morning there was a goat nibbling at my front porch—and I live in a very small house and—"

Judge Sullivan smote his desk with a gavel.

"Did you kidnap those goats?"

"Yes."

"You had no excuse. You complain of what they eat. Don't you know that goats must live? Five dollars and costs for you, young man—and return the goats to their owner."

Mrs. John O'Neill owns the goats. She lives across the street.

Goats Eat House 'Til Owner Robert Brady Balks

CHICAGO.—The prisoner was given the usual opportunity, before hearing his doom pronounced, to say anything that might seem to him pertinent.

He was Robert Brady, 7806 Langley avenue. The charge was "disorderly conduct" in kidnapping three goats.

By DOROTHY BLACKMORE.

"It certainly is exciting to get a Bridge pad for a present when you know nothing about Bridge and care less!" lamented Bess Watrous, handling the brown leather score pad she had received by parcel post.

"You should keep your friends informed," teased her brother, picking up the pad and examining it. He sniffed. "And it smelt of camphor balls!"

"Worse yet!" Some one must have given it to Mary last Christmas and she's palming it off on you this year. That's one way to do with unwelcome gifts, I must say." Ralph Watrous laughed mirthfully. "It's a nice little pencil, anyway—with an ivory tip, sis. See?"

"I do see—but you may have it, tip and all."

"Sort o' peevish, aren't you? Cheer up, sis!"

"I'm not the least bit peevish, though I am provoked, and I have more than half a notion to sit down and write Mary a straightforward letter telling her that she is a chump!" I certainly can't conscientiously say 'Thank you for the lovely present, etc.' for then I would be as big a chump as she. We're good enough friends to be frank."

"All right—you know Mary Ayres better than I do."

And, believing that she did know her friend Mary sufficiently well to reprimand her for her carelessness—for it was not the first time she had displayed it in gift giving—Bess Watrous wrote a letter. Also, she returned the Bridge score pad, since, as she explained, she had no earthly use for it.

Some weeks later a reply came.

"Your letter amused me so much that I read it aloud to Jim and my friend Tom Cassidy, who is spending the winter with us on the ranch. Tom was so much tickled with the frankness of the writer that he insisted on knowing all about you. I have told him all I know, but he seems insatiable and keeps bothering me to ask you down here while he is with us. Can you come? Of course you can't at this busy season, bury yourself on a Texas ranch, but—at least I've asked you."

This, in part, was Mary's letter, and Bess was not pleased, at first, at the idea of having had her letter read for the amusement of two men—Jim Ayres and this Tom Cassidy.

"And yet," she said to her brother that night. "I really would enjoy the novelty of a ranch in winter. Mary is only half-hearted in her invitation. Would you go, Ralph?"

"I surely would if I was as crazy to meet a strange man as you are, sis. Don't you have enough on your string now?"

When she was on the train bound for the remote ranch in Texas on which her old friend Mary had been willing to bury herself for Jim Ayres she could not help smiling inwardly at the way in which Fate had seemed to push her into this step.

She thought of this again as she was being driven quickly through the moonlit roads to the ranch house the night she arrived at the village in southern Texas.

"I tried to get Tom Cassidy to come in for you, Bess," her host explained, with a twinkle in his eye; "but he had a game of Bridge on with Mary and a couple of our friends in a neighboring ranch and he hated to leave."

Bess laughed. "You're as frank as ever, Jim—as frank as I was about the silly present Mary sent me. I'm afraid your Mr. Tom Cassidy wouldn't thank you for telling me his excuse for not coming, would he?"

"Maybe not," admitted Jim. "But—his is mighty fine. Bess, mighty fine stuff is Tom!"

Bess did see the lights between the trees and as they drove quickly toward the house they were silent, and she imagined Tom Cassidy coming toward her. She wondered why she took such an interest in a man who did not care enough about seeing her to leave a game of cards.

"It—it is you, isn't it, Bess?" she heard him saying, as he took her hand when Mary introduced him. "I thought it must be. Even as a wee girl you were frank enough to tell me you didn't care to play with a red-headed, freckled boy named Cassidy."

Bess blushed furiously. "You're redder yet, but—well, the freckles are gone at least," she said, trying to hide her embarrassment.

"And you still won't play with him because—you don't like Bridge," laughed Mary, her arm about Bess.

"I don't know what I'll do down here, if you're all such fiends for the game," Bess replied, looking at Cassidy.

"Learn it," said Jim.

Bess shook her head.

"You'd better," added Cassidy.

"If you do I'll give you back your Christmas present, Bess," said Mary over her shoulder as she went out to the kitchen to find a "bite" to eat.

Cassidy stepped up to her as she stood before the great crackling fire.

"She can't—I have it and I mean to keep it, Bess. Do you know why?"

Bess did not look up. "Perhaps I do, but don't tell me tonight. Wait till I learn a few tricks of the game."

"Cassidy laughed. 'Learn'! You know all the tricks already, girl. It's your game now—you know you've won."

"I think you're the one that's won, Tom," she said.

When Children Were Marketed.

In selling their children the Japanese in the famine stricken districts are following a custom that has not always been unknown in England. In the year 1017 King Canute found it necessary to issue an edict forbidding English parents to sell their children to the Irish as slaves, in accordance with their pleasing habit.

Acid Is Slow To

Excess uric acid left in the blood by weak kidneys, causes more diseases than any other poison.

Among its effects are backache, headache, dizziness, irritability, nervousness, drowsiness, "blues," rheumatic attacks and urinary disorders. Later effects are dropsy, gravel or heart disease.

If you would avoid uric acid troubles, keep your kidneys healthy. To stimulate and strengthen weak kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills—the best recommended special kidney remedy.

ONE'S DUTY TO BE HAPPY

Other People Inspired by Spirit of Cheerfulness Which Can Almost Be Commanded.

The better we understand life, the more we come to the realization of the fact that happiness is a duty. It signifies that we are working in harmony with the laws of our being. It is one of the concomitants of righteousness.

Righteousness in its last analysis will be found to be living in right relations with the laws of our being and with the laws of the universe about us.

This attitude, this habit of happiness, is also a benefit to others. As cheerfulness induces cheerfulness in others, so happiness inspires and induces happiness. We communicate this condition to those about us. Its effects come back in turn from them to us again.

As anger inspires anger, as love and sympathy inspire love and sympathy in others, each of its kind, so cheerfulness and happiness inspire the same in others.—Ralph Waldo Trine.

Queen's Close Friend.

Lady Mount Stephen, whose husband is likely to succeed Lord Strathcona as high commissioner for Canada in London, is probably Queen Mary's oldest and most intimate friend. Before her marriage in 1897 to the Canadian millionaire peer, she was Miss Glean Tufnell, and was lady-in-waiting and the favorite companion of the late duchess of Teck. She has been the friend and confidante of the queen from her girlhood, as well as a great favorite with all the members of the Teck family.

Paraguay's "Railway Beetle."

In Paraguay there is found a "railway beetle," a kind of glowworm, which emits a strong red light from head to tail, but also a green light along each side of its body.

SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Also Have Things to Learn.

"For many years I had used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system," writes a veteran school teacher.

"Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much-loved work in the public schools after years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic poisoning.

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head, and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head and, at times after exertion, a general 'gone' feeling, with a toper's desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years.

"A short time ago friends came to visit us and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years back I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum which I did not like at all.

"This time, however, my friends made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Soon I found myself improving in a most decided fashion.

"The odor of boiling coffee no longer tempts me. I am so greatly benefited by Postum that if I continue to improve as I am now, I'll begin to think I have found the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. This is no fancy letter but stubborn facts which I am glad to make known."

ABERDEEN.

The revival meeting which has been going on at the Methodist Church, with Rev. Horn as pastor, will close tonight. Mr. Harry Rains was a Maysville visitor yesterday.

Miss Ollie Frazier was over from Maysville Friday and spent the evening with her sick sister, Miss Annie Lee, who has been sick for quite a while.

After an illness of over a year, Mrs. Sidwell, who resided with her daughter, Mrs. John Bodey, here, passed away Wednesday night. Funeral this morning at 10 o'clock.

Coasting is fine now. Many young people enjoy themselves these nights.

ABERDEEN ITEMS FROM THE GREENA GREEN.

The condition of Capt. W. H. Herbert is not so good, he is failing steadily.

Last week was golden jubilee week all over the land for the Knights of Pythias order.

Candidates nominating petitions are being circulated, to get their names on the ballot at the primary August 11. The condition of Benjamin Shelton is not improved any, his daughter, Mrs. Bowman Armer, of Augusta, arrived Saturday to stay with him awhile.

Mrs. D. H. Senteny, of Birmingham, Ala., and Mrs. Andrew Hunter of Maysville, were guests of Mrs. Anna Campbell, Saturday afternoon.

Chief Mackey of Maysville is on the job, and is making one of the best of his life in Maysville. He has certainly made quite a difference in the old town.

Nine out of ten successful men, and ten out of ten pretty women are conceded.

THREE PERSONS BURNED TO DEATH IN THEIR HOME.

Glasgow, Ky., February 27.—The home of Mary Kinslow, colored, burned last night.

She, her aged mother and her two-year-old baby were burned to death. Mrs. Kinslow could not walk from rheumatism and her mother was also a cripple.

The two-year-old daughter of J. T. Arterburn, a farmer, fell into a grate and was burned to death today.

REMARKABLE CASE of Mrs. HAM

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her Life and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.—"I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation, female weakness, pains in both sides and bearing down pains, was short of memory, nervous, impatient, passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if I had not used your medicine. I can work all day, sleep, eat anything I want, have no weak, nervous spells, no fears and dreads are children and husband, and as I am almost perfectly cured, I feel that I am almost as good as new. I feel that I am almost as good as new. I feel that I am almost as good as new."

Dr. D. 1, Box 22, Maysville, Ky.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.
"Trusting in Riches and Trusting in God."

Mason County is proud of her wealth. We boast of surplus capital in our banks. Are we as proud of our piety and devotion to God? We have no less devotion than most of the counties in our State and we certainly have no more.

That is being wealthy does not make us religious. Occasionally some person will give liberally to charity or to religious causes and expect by such an act alone to merit heaven or to cover up past and present sins. The amount given may not mean more to our God than a twenty-five cent piece given by another person.

To trust in our material possessions to satisfy our every need is like living on air. To trust in God and serve our fellow men even if that means to deny ourselves some material comforts is the most profitable thing to do.

This may be a test—do we desire wealth for what we may have or for what we may give? Jesus called the first class "fools." For that which we selfishly keep we loose and that which we give we keep eternally.

One suffragist says men ought to be abolished. Yes; but then who would make the bed for the sweet peas?

"HE MAY BE PRESIDENT"

That is the proud privilege of every American born boy.
But, whether or no, he is your son and photographs that preserve his boyhood and youth will mean everything to you in after years. What he means to you now, he will also mean to others some day, and the little collection—"taken at" various ages—will be a priceless treasure for generations to come.

NEAR DEATH BY SMOTHERING

But Husband, With Aid of Cardui, Effects Her Deliverance.

Draper, N. C.—Mrs. Helen Dalton, of this place, says: "I suffered for years with pains in my left side, and would often almost smother to death."

Medicines patched me up for awhile but then I would get worse again. Finally, my husband decided he wanted me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, so he bought me a bottle and I began using it. It did me more good than all the medicines I had taken.

I have induced many of my friends to try Cardui, and they all say they have been benefited by its use. There never has been, and never will be, a medicine to compare with Cardui. I believe it is a good medicine for all womanly troubles."

For over 50 years, Cardui has been relieving woman's sufferings and building weak women up to health and strength.

If you are a woman, give it a fair trial. It should surely help you, as it has a million others.

Farmers

Have you ever tried our way of borrowing money to pay for a farm?

You, of course, know that most farms are sold for one-third cash and the balance of the payment is represented by lien notes due in one and two years. You also know that there are times when it is impossible to pay these notes when they become due.

Our specialty is lending money on good farms for LONG PERIODS. Wouldn't you rather have five years to pay the balance than two years?

Any one expecting to buy farms this March will do well to come in and consult us about getting the money.

We have been giving satisfactory service for 24 years.
